USE OF ENGLISH Time: 25 minutes

Task 1. Read the passage below and write the appropriate form of each verb in brackets
Dolphins

What do you know about dolphins? The relations between dolphins and human beings (1) HAVE long surprised people. These relations (2) have kept (last) for thousands of years. Pictures of dolphins (3) used to decorate the coins of ancient Greeks. Sailors consider the presence of dolphins near ships (4) is (be) good luck. Now dolphins (5) spend (train) and they take part in the performances that both children and grown-ups like. If you (6) spend (train) your holiday on the Black Sea coast, you (7) can see dolphins playing near the shore. They (8) come (come) early in the morning and before sunset. No one (9) has ever seen (see) a dolphin attack a human being.

Task 2. For questions 10-18, read the text below and decide which answer (A, B, C or D) best fits each gap.

Off the beaten track

The expression 'getting off the beaten track' is used to (10) refer to the experience of avoiding famous tourist attractions and choosing instead to explore less well-known places when travelling. For many people the whole (11) idea of travel is to visit cities such as Paris or Venice that have a great (12) reputation as places of beauty and historic importance. Furthermore, they are not particularly (13) impressed by the crowds that are usually found in such locations. But for others who have more of a (14) love of adventure, a good holiday must (15) be unfamiliar experiences, even taking some risks. Travelling off the beaten track may be done by some students who don't (16) stick to a rigid plan, but make decisions about what to do depending on how they feel. Other travellers prefer to spend money on guided tours to unusual locations. Such tours are designed to (17) fit their particular needs, and all the arrangements are made for them. However people choose to get off the beaten track, the hope is always the same: to have a special, often unique (18) experience of a different culture.

'Uh-hun.

'Who is in an orchestra?'

'Well, yes,' Ava admits. 'But she was busking in Truro, which is miles from anywhere. And look at us.' I look at us. Location-wise, we are perfect: in the heart of London's West End, surrounded by Saturday shoppers taking advantage of sun early summer sun. If we were Ava's boyfriend's cousin, we'd probably make a fortune. But I bet she wasn't playing Easy Beatles Tunes for beginners. And I bet she wasn't accompanied by a girl who only took up the tambourine that morning, like I did. 'There is a guy down the street who seems to be watching us. Over there, see? He might give us a pound or something if we're lucky.'

Ava sighs and looks tired for a moment. 'Let's give them Hey Jude. My last performance "had to be heard to be believed", remember?'

I smile. I do indeed remember that quote from the school newsletter last Christmas. I'm not sure they meant it the way she took it, though.

Meanwhile, the guy down the street is slowly heading in our direction. It suddenly occurs to me that that he might be a plainclothes policeman, if plainclothes policemen wear leather jackets and carry orange backpacks. Maybe we're not allowed to play here and he's about to arrest us. Or worse, he could be a kidnapper. Thank goodness I did judo in my last year of primary school. And for once my height could be useful. While Ava got her film-star looks from Mum, I got all my looks from our tall lanky dad. I'm not dad's height yet, but I'm definitely taller than the leather jacket guy. I'm pretty sure I could defend myself, if I had to. As long as he hadn't done judo too, of course.

'Hi, girls,' the man says. 'How are you today?'

'Fine,' Ava answers.

'My name's Simon and I'm from a model agency. Do you mind if I take a picture?'

'Oh, I don't think so,' Ava blushes. 'I'm not really.' 'I meant you, actually,' Simon says, gazing past her. Ava's watching me now. Come to think of it, Simon's definitely looking in my direction. But that can't be right. I stare back at him, confused.

'I've been watching you and you're amazing. Have you thought about modeling?'

'What? Amazing? Me? Modelling? No.

Suddenly I feel dizzy. This must be some sort of a prank. I assume we're being filmed. Is Ava part of it? She looks as puzzled as I feel. Why is Simon talking to me, when the gorgeous one with the film-star face is standing right beside him?

I guess I'm supposed to say something, but my mouth has dried up. I shake my head.

'You should consider it,' he goes on. He feels in the pocket of his trendy black jeans and hands me a card.

'Tell your parents, too.'
